Steve F. Taylor

PRINCIPAL

Steve Taylor has worked on hundreds of projects and developments over many years. He knows through firsthand experience the challenging processes that developers and corporations have to wade through in order to get much-needed government approvals in areas such as: zoning, construction permits, tax credits, tax incremental financing, minority set-asides, neighborhood concerns, brownfield development, land use, environmental impact, property values, and virtually all other areas involved in the intersection between business and government.

Steve understands the political pressure that government officials (both elected and civil service) have to confront while making sometimes very controversial decisions. Steve uses a non-confrontational, coalition-building approach in helping his clients to achieve their government-related goals. Steve believes that most government officials are honest and hard-working people trying to do their best in often trying circumstances. Steve specializes in crafting solutions that meet the business objectives of his clients while at the same time respecting the sensitivities of elected officials and bureaucrats.

Over the years, Steve has developed an extensive professional network that includes government officials, judges, business executives, academics, community organizations, attorneys, and union officials. Steve has the experience, expertise, temperament, and connections to get the job done for his clients. Steve is also an elected public official, with over twelve years of experience serving in the following positions:

- Alderman, La Crosse, Wisconsin – 1997 to 2001
- Common Council President, Franklin, Wisconsin – 2008 to 2014
- Alderman, Franklin, Wisconsin – 2015 to Present
- Supervisor, Milwaukee County Board – 2012 to Present
