

Patricia Wilson- Bio

Patricia Wilson is a proud Community Health Worker (CHW) and serves the National Association of Community Health Worker as a CHW Ambassador and previously a Community Health Worker for NACHW/ASTRO Vaccine Equity Board where she helped reduced vaccine hesitancy in the states of Alabama & Georgia.

Currently she works for Milwaukee County Organization Prevention Programs (MCOPP), as the Program Coordinator for the ACTion Movement Initiatives Grant and a consultant for Wisconsin Literacy collaborating with the Refugee and TANF Programs for a few hours a week. She serves as Wisconsin Public Health Association New Member Committee Co-Chair, Foundation of Black Women Wellness Ambassador, Feeding American Food Leaders Lab Alumni and Mason Temple Church of God in Christ Community Liaison.

Patricia has dedicated her life to improving health of individuals, families, and the community. She has always worked with health services, whether she is working on care health systems, improving social determinants of health or empowering others to take control of their own health.

Patricia the recipient of the 2025 American Cancer Society Kohl's Healthy Families Community Health Worker Champion Award, 2025 CHW Wisconsin Gathering Legacy Award, 2022 Wisconsin Community Health Worker Bridging the Gap Award. 2022 Honorable Mention for the National Esther Holderby Award 2021 Community Health Workers Advocacy, and 2021 Wisconsin State Vaccine Healthcare HERO Award.