This project presents a clear win on multiple fronts for Milwaukee County. It would provide much-needed affordable, supportive housing for older adults; it would bring health and wellness programming directly into a public park setting, making services more accessible; and it directly supports the County's long-term priorities around health equity, inclusive development, and collaborative investment.

At a time when our affordable housing crisis is growing more urgent—especially for seniors who face increasing barriers to stability—this effort offers a compassionate and practical solution. By connecting housing with vital services, green space, and a true sense of community, the MKE Hubs model shows how we can uplift our residents with care and foresight.

Jewish Family Services brings the right mix of experience and values to make this vision real. Their track record in both housing and social services makes them a strong and trusted partner for this kind of work.

I encourage every member of the County Board to support this innovative, people-centered project when the opportunity arises.
