As an aging and disability service provider I've seen a significant increase in demand for these services and only expect it to increase as federal supports are cut. The ADRC has already struggled to meet demand in a timely fashion--the people who work there are wonderful but can only do so much--and they would greatly benefit from an increase in their team size to better serve our community. As a disabled individual who now lives a full life with a fulfilling career in large part because of the significant support I had from disability resources when I was younger, I fully support this proposal.
